CGS Management invests in Schöttli

Diessenhofen / Pfäffikon SZ - CGS Management is investing in the SCHÖTTLI Group and will work with the company's CEO and co-owner Martin Schöttli to develop a forward-looking and international outlook for this well-established Swiss high-tech mould manufacturer. It is planned to create a strong industrial group under the name "Mould Technologies" through further acquisitions.

SCHÖTTLI has an excellent international reputation as a well-established Swiss producer of injection moulds. Increasing internationalisation calls for suppliers of injection moulds who can offer their international customers short delivery times and a comprehensive range of services. To undertake this step in the company's development, the hitherto CEO and sole shareholder Martin Schöttli and CGS Management have joined forces to shape the future of the SCHÖTTLI Group together. They plan to create a strong international industrial group under the name Mould Technologies through further acquisitions.

SCHÖTTLI AG, which was founded in 1952, is an important pioneer in the design of technically sophisticated injection moulds and today employs 150 people. The company has successfully maintained its technological edge through to the present-day. Its expertise in complex applications is underscored by the systematic push to expand in the medical area over the last few years.

CGS Management is an independent, experienced industrial partner which specialises in turning medium-sized companies into international industrial groups. The many years of industrial experience of the partners in an international environment as well as the financial power will play a decisive role. Since 1999, CGS has been investing in medium-sized companies in Switzerland and Europe to create international groups through acquisitions.
